What's Your Leadership Style?
November 9

Written by participant Karen Dill

I'd like to thank James Cassara and the UUCA Leadership Development Committee (LDC) for a very enjoyable Saturday (November 9th) morning. The workshop, "What is Your Leadership Style?" was well-attended and the presentation encouraged both group interaction and individual reflection.

The three types of leaders (authoritarian, participative, and free rein) were examined and identified through group participation in thoughtful activities. Leadership styles were discussed in relation to individual and group needs and growth. A better understanding of leadership as it both positively and negatively influences individual development was achieved through the activities that James' introduced.

One of highlights of the morning was the guided reflection on those personal interactions with leaders that positively change perspectives and lives...those "lollipop moments." (Watch this 6-minutes TED talk to learn about lollipop moments.) James' promise of "a splendid time is guaranteed for all" was indeed fulfilled! Thank you, James and UUCA's LDC.
